

Louie XIV

DJ Louie XIV is a DJ, podcaster, writer, and actor based in Los Angeles and New York City. Over his fifteen year career, Louie has played parties for personal clients including Vanity Fair, Zac Posen, The New Yorker, Fendi, Twitter, Louis Vuitton, and The Metropolitan Museum of Art as well as in venues and clubs in major cities across the country and world, and was featured as one of Time Out Magazine's Most Fashionable New Yorkers.

Louie throws and DJs the popular queer pop party, Gorgeous Gorgeous, at Resident in downtown Los Angeles. He hosts the hit podcast Pop Pantheon, one of the top music podcasts in the country, where he and an array of distinguished critics and media personalities over-analyze the careers of pop stars, then rank them in a system of tiers called the Pop Pantheon.

As a writer and music critic, his work has appeared in several publications such as Buzzfeed, Vanity Fair, and Medium's Cuepoint Collection. His acclaimed short story series "Trapped in the Booth" featured candid vignettes about his experiences working in New York Nightlife. It first appeared in the Huffington Post and later The Cuepoint Collection and became the basis of his web series of the same name, which he wrote and starred in.
